The bay crop on old meaders in this state.

The hay crop on old meadows in this state is light and thin, but the new seeded grass crop is heavy, the general average being a little lower than last year. The bad condition of the old meadows is owing to the drouth of two years ago. The grass covers about 1,000,000 scres and a crop of about 1,100,000 is expected. The winter was hard and there is less old hay than usual on hand, perhaps 150,000 tons.

THERE are no new developments with regard to J. M. Haven's affairs. The Springfield Republican has the following item referring to the financial uneasiness in Rutland: "There seems to be a great deal of uneasiness about the Page financial institutions in Rutland since the Haven defalcation. An old bank man has been offering stock of the Rutland National, of which Page is president, at par, and now the officers of the old savings bank are out with a card saying they are all right and asking depositors not to withdraw their funds."

The starm at Brattlebore the 4th, blow down.

The storm at Brattleboro the 4th, blew down limbs of trees a foot in diameter, awnings, signs, telephone lines, and doing great damage to highways, as well as destroying the crops to quite an extent. News of the approaching storm was telephoned from Townshend and heralded about town. The oldest inhabitants say they never saw it rain so hard. The water seemed to fall in sheets and the streets presented the appearance of small rivers. The lightning struck two dwelling houses in the village, but did little damage. The wind blew such a gale, and the storm was in every way so flerce, that people were fairly afraid of their lives and kept in places of safety during the whole time. THE storm at Brattleboro the 4th, blew down whole time.

On the 37th of July Forepaigh will exhibit here with his unparalleled establishment. Of the wonder-moving scenes presented by his twenty-five trained elephants, a recent exchange remarks: "Volumes have been written on the sagacity of the elephant, and from time immemorial, among the favorite stories chosen to entertain the infant mind, are the interesting appeared set of these conductors hearts. Exercise appeared to these to the extra trains appeared to these conductors of these trains appeared to the extraint the infant mind, are the interesting appeared to these conductors of these trains. ing anecdotes of these ponderous beasts. Even those of more mature years delight in reading the exploits of elephant hunting, and the more thrilling adventures of Asiatic tourists are never more graphically portraved nor sur-rounded with greater interest than when enlivened by hazardous encounters and hair-breadth escapes from engaged specimens of the elephantine genus. No animal when roused is more implacable or more difficult to avert from the object of its fury. In view of these facts Mr. Forepaugh is entitled to unbounded credit for the enterprise exhibited in collecting twenty-five of these huge beasts and reducing them to such subjugation as to make possible this exhibition in a series of tricks and evolutions that surpass any anecdotes written or related that surpass any anecdotes written or related of elephantine sagacity, and tax the credulity of those who do not see their performance for themselves. This is the largest and most perfectly trained herd of elephants ever under the control of one man, and the interest of the performance is wonderfully enhanced by the youth of their trainer, Mr. Adam Forepaugh, Jr., who, hardly out of his teens, has this exceptional number of mountainous beasts subject to his slightest will, and manipulates them with as much coolness and ease as though with as much coolness and ease as though they were so many domestic animals and incapable of taking a sudden freak of independ-ence that might result in a horrible death, not ence that might result in a norrible death, not only to himself, but to all who came in their path. The performances of these clumsy-looking masses of flesh and bone baffle description and almost challenge belief. They dance, go through military evolutions, give acrobatic exhibitions, perform on the tight rope, and do a number and variety of unheard-of tricks too numerous for particularization. Perhaps the numerous for particularization. Perhaps the most marvelous of all their performances is the most marvelous of all their performances is the grand elephantine pantomime which was prepared expressly for them, and in the course of which the sagacious beasts give evidence of their susceptibility to passions more than human in its vivid reality. They portray emotional feelings of love, jealousy, hatred, fear, anger, pride, mirth, grief, sarcasm, contempt, and the like, in a manner so realistic as to almost carry conviction of the truth of the transmigratory theories. Their performances were received with unbounded plaudits, and every man, woman and child in the vast audience heaved a sigh of regret as they were finally marched from the ring in stately order."

"INDEED I hardly know just how it came "InnerD I hardly know just how it came about," said Mrs Stubis to her neighbor, Mrs. Spaulding. "I only know this, that Dr. Johnson said that I had heart disease and must die from it. I had read about the wonderful cures effected by Dr Graves' Heart Regulator; sent to Blossom's drug store and bought a dollar bottle of it and it cured me. Take my advice my dear Amelia, and get a bottle for yourself." The above is a fair sample of the manner in which people talk about this wonderful medical discovery.

A MUCH MARRIED WOMAN.—Mrs. Fowler of this city was married last January to her sixth husband, and strange as it may seem, five of them died exactly two years from their marriage day. Her present husband has been sick for the last four months with chronic jaundice, and was given up by four of our best physicians; as a last resort he began using Sulphur Bitters, and yesterday told our reporter that they had asved his life, smilingly saying that he guessed Mrs. Fowler would be unable to take a seventh better half for some time to come.—Exchange.
